Social Credit members of the legislature's public accounts committee failed today to prove impropriety in the NDP's dealings with the Nan-aimo Commonwealth Holding

The society, an organization committed to furthering socialist education and activities in the Nanaimo region, is used by several NDP MLA's for secretarial services.

In 1975-76 the society received $21,275 from NDP MLA's. The money came from the $728 a month MLA's are allotted to pay constitu-ency secretaries.

Dave Stupich (NDP - Nanaimo), an officer of the so-ciety and chairman of public accounts, told the committee the money had been forwarded to various constituency se-cretaries through the society Supren, who left the chair to give testimony, said the society performed book-keeping and payroll duties for the MLAs and deducted only one per cent of the total paid.

Harold Price, departmental comptroller, testified later that, "I figure if the MLA signs that he's received $728 worth of services. I'm satisfied."

Price is the man responsi-ble for payrolling the MLAs. At present Opposition lead-er Dave Barrett (Vancouver East), Bill King-(NDP — Revelstoke Slovan), Barbara Wallace (NDP — Cowichan) and Stupich are making pay-ments to the Nanaimo society. Price named 14 MLAs, all of them from the government benches, who made similar payments to organizations for constituency secretarial work. Among those named was Premier Bill Bennett, who made payments to Apex Financial Accounts Ltd.

In fact, the government is once again telling them—in very general terms at this stage — that they will have independence, or at least some measure of it. They are the Scottish and Welsh nationalists of whom the British government is very much afraid. The other parties in British politics are also afraid of them and consequently tread carefully on nationalist soil. At the time of the last general election, the Labor party was afraid, or rash, enough to write int its manifesto promises of governmental autonomy for Scotland and Wales.

But legislation to implement these promises foundered during early spring storms in parliament, when the and it faced a daily threat of defeat. The government, realizing its own limitations and that "devolution" for Scotland and Wales was extremely controversial, withdrew its legislation after losing a vote to limit time allocated for its debate.

Foundered Early

But, besides its election promises, the government found itself being pressed to make a commitment to the 13-member Liberal party group which has agreed to maintain it in power. Part of the price of the Liberals' support was new devolution legislation, although the government didn't much like the idea, as was strongly hinted in the Queen's jubilee speech

The British politician prefers the word 'devolution," which means delegation of power, to anything stronger.

For the government has come up with a new scheme which it presented in the most innocuous way possible just before pack-ing parliament for a summer recess. The legislative details will not be known

'They': Ubiquitous Enemy

Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin is, as he says about himself, This time he sounded really citizens," Laurin said in the Quebec legislature recently.

Laurin's expression of outrage is understandable. To practise the politics of envy, Laurin's expression of outrage is understandable. To practise the politics of envy, a politician needs a "They" about whom he public already is, or can be made to feel envious. Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, for example, has spent most of his career in a glorious, impassioned battle against "They.

No politician can afford to allow his They" to get away from him. He cannot allow the "They," powerful, invisible and Machiavellian, against whom he is fighting on behalf of the public, to turn into a common or garden "they" — that is into just another segment of the public struggling along as best it can.

Earn More

Laurin's problem, to which he gave vent in his speech, is that Quebec's English-speaking minority is turning from a "They" all looking down their noses from their mansions in Westrgount into a 'they'" composed of ordinary citizens attempting frantically to become bilingual and deeply worried about their own futures and even more about those of their

Of course, few English-Quebecers ever-did, or now do, live in Westmount. Many are immigrants. Many are working-class Irish. It's true that English-Quebecers earn more than French-Quebecers. The gap, though, has closed, from a difference of about 25 per cent in 1960 to about 10 per spotted the same threat. "They clutch at any straw," said Laurin in the legislature. "They pose as defenders of individual rights . . . They praise our dynamism and cultural progress, as if the francophones did not know better than they what deficiencies, inequalities and underdevelopment they hide ... They even minimize their strength so we will not see a threat there."

The threat, that Laurin has spotted with deadly accuracy, is instead to himself and to the Parti Quebecois. Like all-revolutionary movements, the Parti Quebecois is impelled forward by a conviction of high moral purpose. To entertain moral doubts would be to threaten its

This — the most encouraging political development since Quebec's Nov. 15 election — now is happening. Like patches of blue amid the clouds of rhetoric, the basic common-sense of Quebecers seems to be reasserting itself. Doubts — you can spot them in letters-to-the-editors — are starting to be expressed. not intended to be taken seriously outside tario. New Brunswick and Manitoba which encompass four-fifths of French Canadians outside of Quebec, are already more generous to their minorities than the law Quebec proposes for its English minority. Levesque didn't even bother to observe the form of such matters: he made his offer public before his letters containing it had reached the premiers to

Public Funding

May-I reply through your column to those questioning my position on public funding of independent schools?

The point I emphasized initially is that public funding of independent schools is primarily public funding of a particular religion, philosophy or way of life the public does not want to support. I pointed out that our religious-related schools exist basically to further their own religion. As school for if not to teach the truth as the people, properly informed by God and His

This is perfectly legitimate, but it illustrates clearly the point I make: religious-related schools are there to further their religion, and our people should not be providing funds to help them do so. This violates the separation of church and state, which must be maintained for the good of both.

Everyone interested in this issue should note that the Vatican, as of July 5, called upon its clergy and lay members to work more diligently for government financial support for Roman Catholic schools throughout the world. This has to be sisted vigorously.

May I emphasize that I am just as opsed to public funding of schools spor sored by members of my own church, the Christian Science church (and there are a number throughout the world), as I am to public funding of any other church-related

I understand also that the Seventh Day Adventists, with 26 schools in B.C., have stated they will not accept public funds for their schools if the government unwisely decides to pass Bill 33. They're to be comhave implied that because these so provide a public service they should be classed as public and receive public funds. The reasoning, I suppose, is that they educate students who later enter the public sector and serve the public in various capacities. Churches do exactly same with their Sunday school duates, but they could hardly be called public. They are private institutions but they do not receive public funds to do that It's important to understand that we all have to pay for our public schools. We can-not escape that obligation. Then, if we want to send our children to an independent school because the values. educational standards or behavior of students in the public schools are not acceptable to us, we have to pay for that as well.

In closing may I state again that I have no quarrel with those supporting independent schools. These schools have their rightful place in our society, as special: types of schools meeting the needs of parents sincerely convinced their children will benefit more from a private or parochial school education than from a

Their supporters are basically fine people — many with a generosity and philanthropy few of us exhibit. I taught in an independent school for two years and thoroughly enjoyed the students, staff and parents. So my quarrel is not with the schools or their supporters; it is with the concept that public funds be used to further a particular religion, philosophy or way of life. — Ian Bruce Kelsey, 4070 West 37th Avenue, Vancouver.

Wickaninnish

The Times editorial on the present and future status of Wickaninhish Inn seems to be more of a peevish advocacy of public access by the "hot dog and root beer" set than a fair and complete assessment of the situation. Perhaps the rarified air of the "drive over the mountains" was too heady an experience for the oracle of the Times to be objective, or maybe a liking for wh government operation has done for the B.C. Ferries system, for example!

Unless there has been a radical change of policy at the inn, the general public was not denied use of either the cocktail lounge or dining facilities, albeit on a basis compatible with their size and availability. And doesn't that staggering $40 to $50 a night rate include meals?

What's so wrong with a privately operated resort in a national park, if the leaseholders are both responsible and discriminating? It's much better in most respects than a "park facility" (whatever that means) that not only will radically change the physical structure of the inn, internally at least, but also will be far more costly to taxpayers, whether directly on a self-sustaining basis or through hid-

Surely there are solid reasons for eserving the inn as it now stands and for Parks Canada to build a new and more suitable "park facility" for the purposes the Times thinks are desirable (lounge, tea room, space for flora and fauna lectures). In that way persons of varying in-terests could be accommodated without eliminating the inn which, in effect, surely stands the chance of returning to "sand control and management.

You state: "There's no need to save Wickaninnish. It's already been saved. Too true, but heaven help us from a further extension of the saving by either the bureaucracy of government or the om-niscient Times. —G. I. Powell, 110-1680 Poplar Street that they are the last to be hired do not understand the reasons for the change Under the old order, young white men were always the first to be hired. Now, they complain, they are being dis-criminated against. They are correct.

And why not? If we are going to have an ample supply of have-nots, somebody simply must be discriminated against. Being discriminated against is unpleasant, but it is traditionally and respectably American. There have always been classes shouldering the harsh duty of being discriminated against. It is only fair that young white men - a class that has always escaped this duty — should now take up the burden for a while.

The theory underlying this change of discrimination victims is that since havenots are here to stay, the haue hot life can be made more palatable-if the duty is rotated from time to time. Thus, black people, who have done long duty as have-nots, may draw strength to carry on from the expectation that their children will be given first crack at the good life even when there is an equally able white male applying for it.

The problem is how to make their children equally able. The solution is to discriminate in education. In the past, when white males were exclusively ticketed for the good life, it was arranged by discriminating against blacks at the employers could point out that they couldn't find any black people erudite enough for $30,000 jobs.

By discriminating against white male students, the country can get more blacks into the best schools and reduce the percentage of good-life competitors by creating more unqualified young white young winter their howardays of the new discrimination, which is frustrating their career ambitions and trapping them out on the economic margin occupied by the unemployable. Their plight is compounded by the feminist movement which, with federal muscle behind it, encourages institutions also to mind their step before passing over female applicants.

Young white men nowadays often complain about the injustice of the new dis-

Well, of course it's unfair to have to be so far superior to both female and black competition that you can't get ticketed into the have class without becoming the object of a federal investigation. Even then, as many women and blacks can tell these embittered young men, you are likely to see the college or job of your choice go to a less qualified agent of a more favored class. The fact is that there is nothing new about the new discrimination, except the identity of the victimized class.

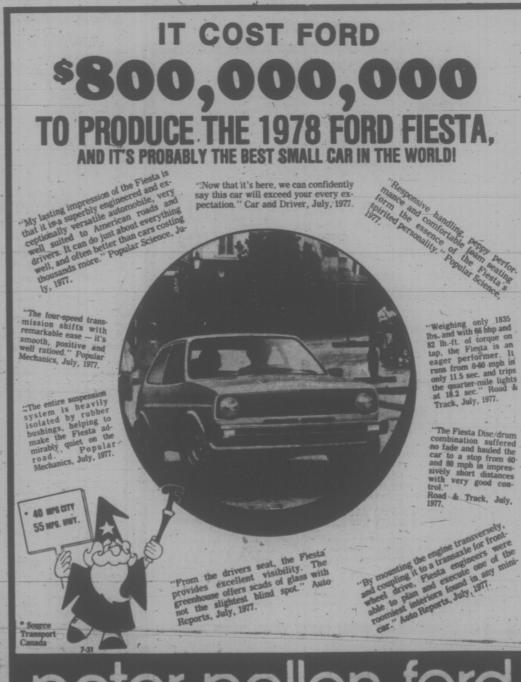

wit, that it is easier to make discrimination work for you than it is to eliminate it from American life. As groups, they have accepted discrimination as a reality and have applied political heat to make certain that if discrimination is to be the rule of the economy, it is at least going to work

White males are still innocent on this point. As a class, they probably believe the myth handed down by generations of contented white forefathers that true merit will conquer all. To believe otherwise would confront them with the necessity of questioning the justice of the American surface. And not it is more confectable for system. And so it is more comfortable for them to complain that they are victims of the aberrational injustice inflicted upon them by noisy pressure groups than to admit that they have been politically out-maneouvered by people who understand the system better than they.

country must have a large supply of people to be discriminated against. This takes us into dangerous water indeed, for when there are enough jobs to absorb a nation's talents and enough schools to fulfill people's desires for education, the need for dis-ple's desires for education, the need for dis-crimination withers away.

The country obviously does not provide enough jobs and schools. Some say it can-not afford to and that trying to do so would destroy a system which, after all, is work-ing pretty well. If not, if have-nots in large supply are an economic necessity, then victims of discrimination are a vital part of the wreteen and the currents will make sure that the duty of victimhood passes to

The California was "in the right spot coming in," he said, but the unidentified freighter should have been on the Canadian side of the strait, in the lane reserved for outbound traffic.

He said the Gabby One's value of $135,000 will be covered by insurance but that won't compensate for the lost fishing season. Petrie said he is going to Vancouver to start looking for another boat,

"Gentled Tobacco" gives Export & Lights new dimensions of taste combining total flavour with never-before lightness.

They said it couldn't be done. No cigarette, they said, could combine complete flavour with a smooth light smoke. This remarkable new cigarette does it.

The flavour is there, full and rich. But without a trace of harshness.

Fine, full-flavoured tobacco, gentled and blended as never before, make Export 'A' Lights unlike any other cigarette. A cigarette with a new kind of gentle strength. A cigarette that goes beyond words and must be tasted to be believed. It's the one cigarette that's just right.

Austin Collects Richest Purse

POCONO MANOR, Pa. (AP) — Sandra Post's bogey on the 18th hole allowed Deb-bie Austin, who shot a fourunder-par 69, to score a one-shot victory Sunday in the $75,000 Pocono Northeast lad-ies golf tournament.

Austin, a 10-year tour veter-an, and Post, formerly of Oakville, Ont., were even at six under par going into the final hole. Post hit her second shot left of the green, couldn't get it up and down and had to settle for a bogey.

Meanwhile, Austin calmly two-putted from 20 feet to win the biggest purse of her career, $11,000. Her 54-hole total was six-under par 213. The victory was her third tournament win of the year.

So far, the research has been encouraging. It really MAY be possible to combine "worthless" clay, "waste" Notice, though, that we say "may." The experiements have just begun and there is a great deal of work ahead before it will really be known just how good (or bad) the material will be.

However, we believe that before too long we'll be able to start the construction of a self-contained, energy and food sufficient pedestrian community of the future. And that lump of "semething" the that lump of "something" the centre has been playing with may be the major building material we use.

By JENNIFER ANDERSON Faces demand the best of creams and care, but the throat area is neglected to the point of showing signs of age well before its time. Not many women are blessed with the swan-like neck of the fash-ion models, but you can im-prove what you've got.

Dear Jennifer: I am 29 years old and beginning to years old and beginning to have a crepey look on my neck. At this 'rate, I can't (nor do I want to) imagine what it will look like when I'm 50. Can you help?"— Francine T.

Francine T.

At your age it's not too late to correct this.

Nothing helps more than "walking tall." Stretch up your neck, keep your chin level and never get caught in uses the dynamic tension principle. Clasp your hands behind your head, with your elbows out, then push your head back without letting your hands give an inch. Then, place your clasped hands on your forehead and push the head forward, still keeping the elbows out. This will help to strengthen your neck muscles to hold your head tall with ease.

If you don't want your neck

If you don't want your neck to look older than your face, you have to give it equal time. Don't stop applying creams at the jawlirie. Apply them to the throat in an up-ward direction. Use both ward direction. Use both hands with a sweeping motion. Thirty upward strokes is about right. Be sure the cream is thoroughly worked into the skin. If you use a skin freshener or toner on your face, pat it on your throat with a special little slapping motion under the chin. Facial masks should also in-clude the throat. They are perfect for refining the skin and flaking off dry patches in those crepey areas.

When if comes to make-up on the neck, go easy. A heavy make-up looks artificial. The best solution is to use a moisturizer"(the same one you use on your face) and a little face gel over it. This will not only match your face, Never be caught with the ring around-the-jawline look of make-up that stops short.

Don't forget to take advan-tage of this season's accessories. Soft scarves at the neckline of almost anything are in. For you, they camou-flage the problem while you're working on it.

One look tells you that the Pacer Wagon is unique and unusual. And one of the features that makes it that way is its great width.

But we didn't make Pacer Wagon and Pacer Sedan wide just to look different. We did it to give you a unique blend of 'mid-size room, ride and handling. And to appreciate that, you have to drive one!

You have to sit behind the wheel to really feel the comfort of Pacer's wide passenger compartment.

You have to zip it through city traffic to experience the manoeuverability afforded by its short wheel base. And you have to open it up on the highway to feel its stability and taut handling provided by its wide track and rack and pinion steering.

Room, width, and comfort aren't the only reasons Pacer is an interesting car to drive. It's loaded with other features that also make it a pleasure to own.

Like an oversized passenger door for easy "ins and outs"...panoramic visibility... a wide rear hatch for easy access to the flat load floor and a fold-down rear seat for extra loading space/in a moment. And, quite properly, most readers will probably say; "It's too rough for me." Agreed. It is. But the fact is that this artificiality resulted in the optimum contract being reached with the assurance that it was the right contract. Thus the result was a systemic triumph.

was a systemic triumph. North's one-club opening bid showed a hand containing 16 or more high card points. South's one-heart response was equally artificial, and showed 8 or more high-card heart roints, plus a five-card heart points, plus a five-card heart

North's one-notrump rebid was an "asking" bid, inquiring of South: "How many controls do you have? South's two-heart rebid answered: "I have four controls" (an ace equals two controls, and a king equals one control).

North's two-space bid was also an "asking" bid, in spades, inquiring: "Partner, how many spades do you have?" South's answer of two notrump said: "Either a sin-gleton or a void in spades."

North now bid the grand slam in hearts, knowing that South could ruff out both of North's low spades, and that South's A-K of diamonds and South's A-K of diamonds and king of clubs would take care of all the minor-suit losers.

The only "grey" area, from North's position, was whether South possessed the heart queen. But even if South didn't, his guaranteed possession of at least five hearts would make the grand slam contract an excellent one.

pegged down this month to obtain plants for starting a new bed, although the runners will develop and root themselves in any case.

If new plants are not desired the runners' should beremoved as soon as noticed so as to save unnecessary expen-diture of plant energy. This means checking the bed at least twice a week.

least twice a week.
Runners can be out with a sharp spade or a hoe, providing the plant roots are not damaged, or with a sharp knife or secateurs.
Commercial plantings of transparies are frequently.

strawberries are frequently replaced with new plants to maintain a high level of prosential procedure, not realiz-ing the few plants they grow, when properly cared for, will continue production for years. When new plants are need-ed it is not wise to let any and all runners root and then transplant those needed and cive the rest away.

both plants and berries will deteriorate.

Looking over the present bed it will be noticed that some plants are producing quantities of runners while

The mass production of runners usually comes from poor fruiting plants, and the plantlets from these will also be poor croppers. The best fruiting plants make only a few ing plants make only a few runners.

If you followed the advice plants with only one or two each parent plant, and the plantiet to each runner. All runners that come later, and all runners from plants not selected for propagation should be removed while given last spring you will al-ready have the best plants marked. If not, select the pears on each runner, nip off jection is used for pegging the

While the plantlets will root into the soil of the bed it is better to root them in pots and place the pots in a cold-frame later for the plants to grow well over winter.

Three-inch clay pots are best for rooting. A little coarse drainage material (stones) is placed in the bot-tom of each pot, then screened compost to within one-half inch of the rim.

A pot is set in the soil directly beneath a plantlet. The runner is gently pressed into the soil of the pot and held firmly in place with a wire "hairpin" over the runner on each side of the plantlet. This prevents disturbance the Water is applied to the pots as needed until the end of September. At that time the runners are severed and the pots bedded into fine sand in the coldframe.

The reason for using a cold-frame is to protect the young plants from excessive rain and from heaving by frost damage.

The coldframe covers are raised on blocks of wood two inches thick to allow perfect ventilation and a cool atmo-sphere. The blocks are removed only in a severe cold spell which could harm the young plants.

A double layer of sacking

A double layer of sacking placed over the covers on frosty nights may be needed if garden is in a low lying area and frosts are frequent.

The new bed can be prepared in the fall and covered with a good layer of compost with a good layer of compost to protect the surface until spring. The young plants can go out in late April to early May, depending on the season winter frequent checking is necessary to ascertain the condition of the soil in the pots, adding a little water when necessary, and to deter mine whether slugs are damaging the young growth.

With care and attention strong plants with good root systems will be the reward for the energy expended now.

Even the capital city which owes its birth to the man isn't doing anything special in memory of the great administrator.

And the most the provincial government could do was to place a simple wreath on his grave in Ross Bay Cemetery. This was a disappointment to history buffs who consider Douglas the most important figure in the political history of the province.

The Victoria section of the B.C. Historical Society did its best, but James McCook, president, said his group did not have the means to orga-reveals in his book, Land, Man, and the Law, many of B.C.'s problems stem from the actions of governments which disregarded Douglas' far-sighted policies.

The author says there would be no Indian land claims controversy today if governments had followed Douglas' policy of compensating the native peoples for their lands and had respected the boundaries

Agricultural lands, includ-ing waterfront, would also have been protected long ago from speculators if his landuse philosophy had prevailed.

Apart from his orunances touching the management of nearly all of the province's resources, one of Douglas' great achievements was maintaining law and order during the development years

He faced a major crisis in 1858 when thousands of miners poured into the province in search of gold in the Fraser Valley. As most of the newcomers were Americans, there was a danger of Britain

But there was a far greater danger facing the governor. This involved the anti-Indian attitudes of, many of the American miners — attitudes fostered by the white administrators south of the border. It would have taken little to touch off a bloody war. touch off a bloody war.

Douglas was courageous. On one occasion he risked his life by going out by himself and apprehending a murderer.

While Douglas came from a humble Scot family, he seemed to have shared the tastes and political beliefs of his enlightened aristocratic superiors in London. He be-lieved in planning, conserva-tion and in public education.

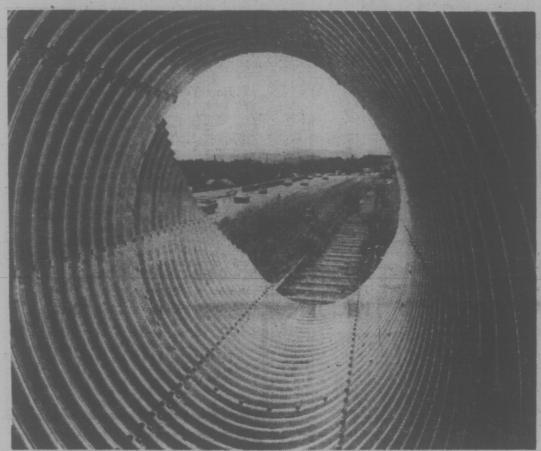

As an individual he was respected but not loved, especially by the more prominent citizens of the colony. He kept to himself, rarely confiding in others. He had no time for frivalous talk. for frivolous talk.

Take the guesswork out of selecting correct cooking time! Use 'Low' to defrost, simmer, stew. Use 'Medium' to roast, bake, poach. And use 'High' to reheat, boil and sautee. Frozen food is defrosted evenly so portions that thaw first won't tend to cook ahead of time. Has 25-minute single speed timer with timer bell. Comes with glass tray and full-color, easy-to-follow cookbook. 227 499 571 DL.
